

MASKED BANDITS HOLD-UP TRAIN AND GET LARGE AMOUNT

BETWEEN $50,000 AND $150,000 TAKEN FROM EXPRESS CAR--RICH HAVIL

Hattiesburg, Miss., May 10.—A hold-up was made by two masked bandits who early this morning held up the Queen and Crescent No. 1, a passenger train No. 2 near Okaloosa station eight miles south of Hattiesburg and blew open the safe of the Southern Express car. The train was held up by two masked bandits who early this morning held up the Queen and Crescent No. 1, a passenger train No. 2 near Okaloosa station eight miles south of Hattiesburg and blew open the safe of the Southern Express car. The train was held up by two masked bandits who early this morning held up the Queen and Crescent No. 1, a passenger train No. 2 near Okaloosa station eight miles south of Hattiesburg and blew open the safe of the Southern Express car.

The safe in the express car was packed with a time signal lock when the train left New Orleans last night and there was a guard in the car in addition to the regular messenger. It is said there was one package of money representing the payroll of the Alabama and Vicksburg railroad at Meridian and also about 25 packages of money representing the railroads of agents of the express company at points along the Vicksburg, Meridian and Pacific Railroad. In addition to these there were two or more sacks of silver containing one thousand dollars each, other packages of currency and several packages of jewelry, valuable stock certificates and bonds.

The hold-up of the train was effected in true wild west manner, not withstanding a generous knowledge of weapons, not a shot was fired. The passengers were not molested. When the train was passing the flag station Okaloosa, the masked bandits climbed over the tender and with drawn revolvers, told out to passengers, "Mother and his friend to obey orders. His confidence in the messenger on his brother's saying, "I'll stop right now."

No word one of the bandits fell on around the curve and stop when I tell you to stop. After the train had turned the curve about Okaloosa, the engineer was given the command to stop and complied promptly. With guns pointed in their hands, the engineer and fireman were marched back to the baggage car and the form was ordered to call the express messenger. When Messenger A. Gray of Chattanooga stepped to the door of his car he looked into the muzzle of a pistol and did not hesitate to obey the order to get down. Other trainmen were promptly lined up alongside the train and leaving them in charge of his partner, the commanding bandit jumped into the express car and at once began work on the large through express.

Dynamite Open Safe. After applying a case of nitro glycerine he got down and waited the explosion. It was ineffective and he successfully fired three charges of the high explosive were set off before he accomplished his purpose. The sixth charge blew off the safe door and scattered silver coin and packages of currency and other valuables in every direction.

Except about three hundred dollars in silver everything in sight was hurriedly placed in sacks and the two men backed off into the darkness with their revolvers leveled at the heads of the train crew. After walking half wards for about 100 yards the men dashed off and were believed to have fled on horses.

Express Official, Retired. New Orleans, May 10.—Southern Express officials here today declined to vouchsafe any information as to the amount of money secured by the robbers who early today held up the Queen and Crescent fast train south of Hattiesburg, and dynamited the express car. It was denied, however, that the robbers obtained a sum approximating $150,000. Express officials here admitted the safe contained the following valuables: Two sacks of silver dollars, each containing $1,000 each; one half dozen packages of jewelry; one package of bonds; one package of stock certificates; several miscellaneous items, aggregating a few thousand dollars.

The officials here are strictly reticent about discussing the amount of money and valuables secured by the robbers and disburse reporters by saying: "Exactly how much the robbers secured we will not be able to determine until a thorough investigation has been made."

One of the chief detectives of the Southern Express company was on the train in a sleeper, but his name was withheld by the company. The extra guard in the car whose presence may be considered confirmatory of the reports that the train contained extra large shipments of currency.

Company officials here said the dead heading back to his home in Chattanooga.

MARIANA NEGRO IS AGAIN CARRIED TO JACKSONVILLE

DOUGHT HERE LAST NIGHT TO PREVENT A PROBABLE RANSOMING

Sheriff Hays of Marianna was here last night with the negro murderer of Calhoun, Fla., who was to have been tried yesterday for killing a deputy sheriff some time ago and who barely escaped being lynched Tuesday night. The negro was taken on the 10:10 train last night to Jacksonville where he will be held for safe keeping. The prisoner killed a deputy sheriff in Marianna county Fla. six or eight months ago and in the killing took place in Marianna county, of which Marianna is the county seat. The killing was not at that time. For a lynching, the officers took the negro to Jacksonville shortly after the killing and had been there for some time until Tuesday, when he was brought back to Marianna for a preliminary hearing. Before the officers he was accompanied by a dozen militiamen from Jacksonville who remained over at Marianna yesterday to assist the officers in preventing a probable lynching. Tuesday afternoon armed men began to come into Marianna from Calhoun, the adjoining county, and within a short time a large crowd had gathered, no attempt being made to conceal their intentions of having revenge on the negro. The officers managed to hold their prisoner until yesterday afternoon when he was shipped out and brought over the Bay Line road to Dothan where he was held until being taken to Jacksonville last night.

Watch That Takes Up Little Space and is Most Practical and Convenient.

Watches and a watch are two things that should always be within easy reach of one's bedside at night time, and the habit of placing them under a pillow is by no means a good one.

Give therefore a sketch of a watch and decorative little pocket for carrying from the wall at some convenient spot well within reach and capable of holding both these articles. It is carried out in pale green silk, and in the upper part a small stick of wood is sewn into the material and in the center of the wood a little brass knob is screwed on which the watch can be hung. Attached to the ends of the wood is a loop of dark green silk ribbon finished on either side with three loops and at the top with a small bow. The lower part is arranged as a pocket for the matches and on the front the conventional design of a watch is worked in pale pink silk and the pocket is lined with soft silk of a color to match, and dark green silk cord finishes off the edges throughout.

WAYS OF CARRYING WATCH

There Seems to Be No Set Fashion, and Many Methods Are in General Use

Modern ingenuity has devised all sorts of odd plans to carry the watch in. Worn as a bracelet forms the head of a parasol handle, or is tucked in the corner of a card case.

One girl has had her tiny watch set in the lid of her vanity box which she wears on a ring another has a watch set as the head of one hat pin, while the other is a vanity box.

A curious watch set as a seal ring for the little finger was one of the purchases brought home from Switzerland by a woman with money enough to go in for novelties.

A specially handsome setting for a desk watch for a drawing room is a deep silver frame of repousse silver the face of the frame rounded to the depth of an inch and three inches wide. The back of the frame is also silver.

Very new is a writing pad and blotter with corners of heavy brocade and a tiny gilt watch set in one corner. This is more than a trinket as the works are said to be unusually good. It is convenient in traveling when the desk watch is not carried.

Many of the new handbags have watch set in them sometimes in one of the inner compartments again on the outside in one of the lower corners. There are an undoubted convenience for carrying.

Another watch is set in the side of a leather box which contains compact mirror for nose and address books and a smelling bottle.

DRESS NOTES

Double tunic fall over satin at its Black with brown is just new in Great favor

Pique is one of the materials promoted for summer wear. Graceful hats of amethyst straw are faced with violet velvet.

Touchees of cerise bring notes of red to many dark gowns. Silver trinkets are a favorite touch to gray chiffon over-dresses.

Violet tulle veils many chemise-dresses of lace on afternoon gowns. Hat frames with borders of straw have gray dotted net over them.

Graceful picture hats of straw are large as to crown as well as brim. Dresses of checked lattices are sometimes veined with gray mar-quelettes.

Novel Costume A most unusual costume was fashioned from black velvet. The skirt slightly wider than those popular earlier in the season had a belt of emerald. The coat was a tunic. A design of roses and tendrils made of emerald covered the back and front. An emerald cord was worn with this.

INDUSTRY AND MECHANICS

MATERIAL FOR HIP SHINGLE

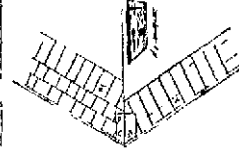

No Necessity for Fancy Kinds as Ordinary Shingles Last Long Enough and Look Better

There are many fancy hip shingles to be had. Some use tin or zinc in freed from out to suitable length and width.

Have you ever tried using ordinary shingles cut to a level at the butt to conform with course line?

I use the hip shingles four and one half inches wide on the roof of a house, if lower down for window hood porch roof etc. I use the shingles narrower—about two and a half to three inches wide.

After laying the double course on both sides of the hip you lay shingles b and c. The dotted lines above a indicate chalk lines which to make plans are not spaced tight but ten feet apart.

You may shingle by straight edge I prefer do. The dots represent nails which should be put far enough up on shingles to be covered by the next course.

The second course is laid over c and b then d is laid on the second course. a shows ordinary course cut to conform with hip.

Shingles laid along the hip with the grain of wood nearly straight do not have the tendency to split like the three-cornered pieces but rather help to build down those underparts.

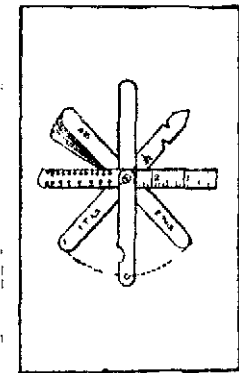

In trimming off the three-cornered pieces of the regular courses, I use a sharp chisel about one and one half inches wide and to finish off I use a smooth plane with handle having iron set quite coarse is easier and quicker than prying all with a chisel, getting the edges of shingles straight and a better fit.

As the top shingles will be of the same quality as the rest of the roof they ought to last as long and they certainly look right too.

MEASURING TOOL IS UNIQUE

Feature Is Series of Gauges of Varying Thicknesses Pivoted Together in an Encasing Handle

An unusual measuring tool has been designed by a New York man. The feature is a series of gauges of varying thicknesses that are pivoted together in an encasing handle. One part of the handle is marked off into an ordinary rule and the other has perforations of varying distances. Each gauge is numbered according to its thickness and one tapet and has a graduated scale along its length.

Measuring Tool

As will be understood this tool is for measuring the depth of open lines and slots and the like. One in a note of the gauges can be brought out, the next a thickness is formed that will just fit the cavity to be measured. The device follows up.

Artificial Sponge

It is said that the Germans have recently succeeded in making artificial sponge which takes the place of the genuine article in many respects. Pure cellulose and zinc chloride make a porous mass which is mixed with cork, rock salt. A quantity of this is then placed in a mold and then filled with needles penetrating into the interior in all directions. The salt is then removed by a prolonged washing and the result has the appearance and qualities of sponge. The salt water in the same in four and five days when its interior is freed of the water. It may also be used for blotting purposes.

Excellent White Wash Ten parts of slaked lime to one of hydrate of calcium mixed with salt water makes a white wash that will not easily wash or rub off.

After the Wedding

Well what did you think of the wedding? cried Miss Connolly as she counted into the car. Her pardon, Stell, for stepping on you. She continued stumping over Miss Larson's feet and lunging into a seat next to that young man.

Miss Larson opened on a sleepy eye. Oh did you step on me? she dreamed yawning widely and undisturbedly. I didn't know it.

Sure I did, responded Miss Connolly. I thought I'd better wake you up and tell you about it. You can go to sleep again now.

Miss Larson opened the other eye. I wasn't asleep, Nell Connolly, she said indignantly. I guess a person's got a right to shut their eyes if they want to. My eyes aren't very strong and the light hurts 'em.

Don't let's waste our perfectly good time fighting. With each other this morning, said Miss Connolly. If we do we won't have any time left to knock the wedding.

Say, began Miss Finkle eagerly. I thought you pretty near fell over the way Maine's hair was fixed. I don't know to goodness when I get married I'll have a hair dresser fix my hair. I wish I didn't have so much as a work shop to go to for a year.

I thought her hair looked pretty good for Maine, said Miss Larson sleepily. It always looks like she's about to sleep.

Her dress was a peach though, said Miss Finkle. At least it will have been if it had any fit to it. All that hand embroidery and that head trimming, must have cost a pile.

If and embroidery? exclaimed Miss Connolly. That's all you know about it. I'm sure over to look at Maine's clothes to-day evening and tell of it. Good and it wasn't no more hand embroidery than nothing.

Well she must a gath a corner on this year's crop of heads, said Miss Finkle. What do you think I said to the lady that was standing next to me when Maine came into the parlor? I give her a dig with my elbow and I say, Say, I say, Maine must have got mixed in her dates and thought she was a Christmas tree.

My! The lady got as red as any thing I designed that gown, she said sniffing up her nose at her maid as she could be. It modeled after a gown that was imported straight from Paris and you couldn't find its duplicate in Chicago. I'm a high priced model, she says besides being Miss Finkle's own aunt.

Land! I just faded away like I'd been blown off the landscape.

It's a pity you couldn't learn not to have such rude manners, Jen said Miss Connolly.

I guess if I could just learn to shut up and keep shut up it would help some, agreed Miss Finkle good naturedly.

Maine didn't have such an awful lot of presents as I thought she would. Miss Larson opened her eyes long enough to remark. I kind of thought she'd have a lot more when she did.

Scrap of em was expensive though I guess, said Miss Finkle. Now I bet that cut glass pitcher and them glasses cost twenty dollars.

Six on that, said Miss Connolly decidedly. I picked up every one of em and run my finger over em and they wasn't sharp if I cut them ought to be. They was real smooth.

Well that shows how you can fool me, Miss Finkle admitted. Let them be a whole lot rather have a shabby set like that than some little dinky piece that wouldn't make no show at all.

Some bet, said Miss Larson. Anybody would of course. I guess Maine's folks are pretty well off. I'm sure. Her new brother gave her that dandy set of knives and forks that was layin' upon the dresser when the place was the hand painted fruit design up em.

Nothing much to them, said Miss Connolly. I guess they didn't cost more'n about five dollars. They was plated and it wasn't first class plate, either.

Plated? cried Miss Finkle. How do you know they was plated?

Why I took em out and looked at them. I called Miss Connolly, placidly. You can't fool me. All the silver things in the par place except that little pickle fork that the two Hyams give her.

My! I'd hate to give such a awful little thing away, murmured Miss Larson. I think it was a lot better to give her something big. Our silver tray looked like it could have brought up forty-three dollars.

Including the silver she married, said Miss Connolly. She wasn't the former though? I bet he rolled their clothes. He was afraid to roll down in em and the way they'll was a fright. Did you play how he lay little in one shoulder all the time the preacher was talkin'.

No, said Miss Finkle. I think I was too busy tryin' to count the tails of Maine's dress.

Miss Larson (her hand dug into her muff and yawned once more. Well I'm glad I went, she said, but I don't know if it was worth the money we put in to this trip even if it did work out. The bride and groom got married.

"MY WEDDING GIFT"

to my daughter was an Emerson piano. She had learned to play on an Emerson piano in the old home and it was only natural that she should want one in her new home. As I listen to the new Emerson I realize that it is still in the front rank. If there is any change from the old Emerson, it is for the better.

The verdict of Emerson users, during sixty years, is unimpeachable and should carry conviction to all lovers of piano music.
